THERE is no doubt that the 20th century, and especially this most glorious of its decades, will go down in history as an age of quick and wholly unpredictable change. Even science fiction does not seem able to keep pace with the change, and one rather sympathizes with Mr. Ray Bradbury, a leading practitioner in the field, when he says that he must start writing very fast indeed about the future world in order to stay still. In the Arab world today it is no less difficult to keep pace with developments, especially in the field of political thinking. To give one example: the term "peaceful co-existence" has recently cropped up in Egyptian and Syrian pronouncements; we are now being told that the principle has become one of the things that find favour with Cairo and Damascus. It took us some time, however — and it came as something of a shock, to realize that what went with this move was not that these regimes advocate peaceful co-existence between East and West, but that they believe that the Arabs are willing to co-exist with one or both of the conflicting world blocs. To the two main principles on which "liberated Arab policy" rests — Arab Nationalism and Positive Neutrality — must now be added that of Peaceful Co-Existence.

In Cairo, the idea of a Third Force is not a new one; Nasser has always liked to identify himself with Mr. Nehru and Marshal Tito, and he made much of the conference he held with them in Brioni last year. But the concept of a Third Force led by the Arab countries — presumably themselves under the leadership of Colonel Nasser — is quite new. General Abdul Hakim Amer, the Egyptian C-in-C and War Minister, reporting last Monday to the Egyptian National Assembly on the results of his recent visit to Moscow, claimed that Egypt was discharged as "world miscreants in helping East to Positive Neutrality." This mission rejects the division of the world into two irreconcilable camps whose territories are used as military bases and whose armies are always prepared. Egypt," he went on, "is of the opinion that it would be more beneficial to the human race (for Egypt) to consolidate her self and serve as a buffer area and a bridge between the two areas rather than align herself to either of them." Seeing what pompous nonsense it all amounts to, one is not surprised that during his Moscow sojourn General Amer found "added proofs of a real understanding of this stand of ours and that he had to tell the Soviet leaders things which encourage it."

THE theoreticians of the Arab Third Force are even more ambitious. There is one school of thought in the Arab nationalist movement which envisages a world where the Arab Nation will be the sole survivor and preserver of human civilization and the world's cultural heritage. After Europe and America have destroyed themselves in the coming world war, the Arabs are seen as the only survivors who can continue the human tradition. Hence the call for a distinct Arab ideology voiced by so many Arab intellectuals today — an ideology which is to match the two conflicting ones of democracy and communism. As one Arab intellectual, a well-known literary critic and short story writer from Aleppo, has put it: "The world can divide itself into as many camps as it chooses; the Arab Nation remains in the Arab Camp."

THE doctrine of Positive Neutrality has itself gone through some change, mainly theoretically. It seems now that the positiveness of positive neutrality lies in the fact that its adherents would cooperate with either of the two world camps within limits to be set by themselves. These limits are to some extent guaranteed, that neither camp should consider that the positive neutrals have aligned themselves against it. According to Ihsan Abdul Kadous, Editor of "Rose el-Yousuf," the doctrine actually requires that close relations should be established with both camps. He wrote recently: "If Egypt today has close ties with the Soviet Union and not with the United States, this cannot be a matter of principle: it is a policy imposed by special circumstances... if we have in our midst people who advocate the establishment of close ties with the U.S., this is not contrary either to positive neutrality or to the principles of the Revolution. But should these people try to interfere with our relations with Russia, then they deviate from the Revolution and become its declared enemies." Not, the least fascinating feature of such declarations is the apparent innocence with which they are made. Yet one must not be too sure: this is an age of sudden and unpredictable change.

Foreign Investors Want Assurances

TEL AVIV Saturday. — It is possible to raise tens of millions of dollars for investment in this country if such investment were encouraged on a business basis. Dr. B. Avniel, M.K., Head of Chairman of the Knesset Economic Committee, told the Commercial and Industrial Club luncheon yesterday.

Dr. Avniel recently toured the Americas and had found many potential Jewish investors, but they all wanted to be sure that they would be able to take profits back from Israel and import equipment and raw material without limitation. They also wanted to be certain that what would be allowed to withdraw the original sums they invested if they felt like selling out.

Turning from the prosaic, Dr. Avniel said world Jewry awaited Israel's spiritual leadership. He thought Israel did not do enough to draw closer to world Jewry and warned against what he charged was a tendency to treat Jews outside of Israel with disdain.

Polio Booster Shots To Start January 1

The infantile paralysis immunization campaign will enter its third phase on January 1, exactly a year after the beginning of the mass inoculations, and will last until the end of April. It was announced by the Ministry of Health on Friday.

In view of past experience, it was decided to conduct the campaign in separate phases, first giving the third booster shot throughout the country to those who had received the first two shots earlier in the year. During March and April, the campaign will be extended to include babies born between the end of October and January 1. The entire campaign will cover 100,000 children.

The spokesman for the Ministry explained that the effect of the first two shots might be nullified if the children who received them are not brought for the third booster shot which prolongs the immunity against polio.

It was also revealed that the incidence of infantile paralysis for the first nine months of the year fell by 90 per cent as compared to corresponding periods during the years 1932-1936. The four cases of deaths resulting from polio recorded this year were all of children who had not been inoculated.

'Jerusalem' Given Grand Welcome

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA, Saturday. — The establishment of 300 new factories and the expansion of 200 existing ones in 11 different industries to provide employment for 50,000 additional workers are included in the Industrial Development Programme of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry for the next ten years. It was revealed by Mr. P. Saphir, the Minister of Commerce and Industry, at a meeting of the local branch of Mapai on Friday night.

Mr. Saphir, the editor of "Haaretz," said that public attitude on income tax would take a turn for the better when the rates were lower. He said that the State's "original sin" was its mistrust of its citizens, which in turn brought about the citizen's mistrust of the State's agents such as the Shin Bet and Aleph.

He admitted that in principle there was justification for such a service, but in order to make it effective the rates should be lowered.

Mr. Saphir reviewed the accomplishments of the last ten years, particularly in the field of agriculture, but added that we had not reached all the goals we had set ourselves.

He stressed the fact that our annual balance of payments deficit is about $200m. It is covered by German reparations, personal restitution funds, the U.S. Grant-in-Aid and world Jewry. These sources may well dry up in the near future, he warned, and we would do well to plan the next decade so that we won't be dependent on these resources.

The Minister declared that our development effort will have to be made mainly in the industrial field to aid in the absorption of the next million immigrants expected in the coming decade. He added that his Ministry is planning the location of most of the new enterprises in the Negev and in the Arava, to assure the organic absorption of the south into the rest of the country. (ltm)

PETAH TIKVA, Saturday. — The establishment of 300 new factories and the expansion of 200 existing ones in 11 different industries to provide employment for 50,000 additional workers are included in the Industrial Development Programme of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry for the next ten years. It was revealed by Mr. P. Saphir, the Minister of Commerce and Industry, at a meeting of the local branch of Mapai on Friday night.

Mr. Saphir reviewed the accomplishments of the last ten years, particularly in the field of agriculture, but added that we had not reached all the goals we had set ourselves.

He stressed the fact that our annual balance of payments deficit is about $200m. It is covered by German reparations, personal restitution funds, the U.S. Grant-in-Aid and world Jewry. These sources may well dry up in the near future, he warned, and we would do well to plan the next decade so that we won't be dependent on these resources.

The Minister declared that our development effort will have to be made mainly in the industrial field to aid in the absorption of the next million immigrants expected in the coming decade. He added that his Ministry is planning the location of most of the new enterprises in the Negev and in the Arava, to assure the organic absorption of the south into the rest of the country. (ltm)

'SHIN ALEPH'

TEL AVIV, Saturday. — I associate myself in full with the work of the Income Tax informants, both known and secret, who strive for the assurance of equality and justice in the Income Tax rates, and thereby render an important service to the State," said Mr. Z. Sharot, the Minister of Education, in a speech at the Agudat Achim meeting at Petah-Tikva on Friday night.

The relevant clause was Patah-Tikva. Mr. Aranane said:

Twenty-five educationalists are already at work compiling suitable material for schools on History and Literature, on Science and Technology, and statements of the past, as well as an Encyclopedia on Jewish rites and folklore which will embrace 2,000 items.

Mr. Sharot, the Minister of Education, explained that the trend education system of this country may lead to the creation of two different peoples. The introduction of "Jewish Consciousness" curriculum may prevent such a development.

Mr. Sharot, Deputy Director General of the Ministry of Education, said there was no intention of forcing the "Jewish Consciousness" curriculum on the Citizen's Freedom."

In addition to Mr. Sharot, Mr. Z. Susayeff, M.K., Mr. Hanan Rubin, M.K. (Mapam), and Mr. Gershon Shochat, M.K. (Prog.) participated.

Mr. Sharot declared that the Information Service was indispensable and all its activities were within the framework of the law. The existence of the service was revealed two years ago in the press but did not arouse much comment until recently.

Mr. Sharot, the Minister of Education, declared that the Institute was proceeding in three directions: publication of Israel standards; testing the quality of local products in its laboratories and technical research. He traced the history of the organization from its modern beginnings as a "dim cell" in Rehov Lilleblum when it was established by the association of engineers in 1923, up to official Government recognition in the Standards Act of 1933, he said.

Mr. Sharot justified the existence of the service, but warned against personal movements which had come through the department and had also diverted deductions from the savings of court employees into his own pocket. (ltm)
